Four Teams Tied in Abalone League

The Abalone league got on swimmingly last Sunday. In spite of heavy rains through the week and bad weather the morning of the games, the whole aquarium turned out for the weekly session of baseball. Right down to the Goldfish, still in the glass garage of last place, the teams went to the barrier with their regular line-ups.

The scales should fly in tomorrow's battles, for those who have watched the practices this week report that the Goldfish are positively savage and snapping with impatience to tear into the Sardines. The Seals intend to treat the populace to the sight of a school of perspiring Whales, while the Sandabs make no secret of the fact that they intend to turn the Sharks into material for a museum.

Fred Ammerman's fine pitching for the Sardines pulled the Sharks out of an uncontested lead in the Abalone League last Sunday and sent Carmel's ball-players home with four of the six clubs tied at the top of the standing. Freddy set a new record in turning back Winsor Josselyn's crack outfit with one run and only four hits. The score was 15 to 1.

In the opening bill of last week's triple-header, the Whales swallowed up the Sandabs quicker than Jonah, digesting their rivals 10 to 4. In the second section the Goldfish met the Seals and their second one-run defeat in two weeks. The week before the Whales edged them out 6 to 5 and this time the Seals did it 14 to 13.

The schedule for next week brings together at 1 o'clock the Whales and the Seals. One or the other of these teams will be forced out of the first place tie so they will be battling from the jump. The second game, at 2 o'clock, features the Sandabs and Sharks, while the afternoon's round will be completed with the tail-end Goldfish tackling the scintilating Sardines. To help the junior club of the league in its dash for the pennant one of the veteran stars of the organization will be assigned to service with it each week.

Schedules for the season have been printed by the Pine Cone for distribution. Fans wanting the dope on when the teams play can obtain a schedule by stopping at the Pine Cone office.

MISS MORGAN'S BROTHER DEAD

Word was received last Tuesday by T. W. Morgan, Jr. from his sister, M. De Neale Morgan, that their brother, Dana R. Morgan of Lake county, had died suddenly. Miss Morgan left here Tuesday morning on telegraphic advices of his illness. Deceased leaves a wife and two children.

City Trustees' Session Adjourns at Midnight

Our city trustees met again last Monday night—not evening, night. It was 12 o'clock when they adjourned. And when City Clerk Saidee Van Brower got everything straightened out and tidied up it was 1 a. m.

It was not a very satisfactory meeting either to trustees or citizens. Everybody apparently was working at cross purposes, and nothing was definitely settled. As the crowd was leaving the council chamber a man remarked, "I guess the only way we can accomplish anything in this town is to adopt the city manager plan of government."

Be that as it may, it now appears that if the City Planning Commission is to get a zoning ordinance on the statute books it will have to come by the initiative of the public.

As was anticipated, the tree question came in for considerable discussion, and some of the hysteria that has heretofore prevailed has been quieted as the purposes for which the tree ordinance was enacted became better understood.

After some talk of engaging some one to equalize the assessments this year it is probable that a resolution will be passed at the next meeting appointing a definite assessor. The name of Rolin G. Watkins, a Monterey newspaper man, has been mentioned in this connection.

Movie Vaudevillians Disappoint Townspeople

It's just as well, perhaps, that the vaudeville show by the Famous Players movie actors, schedule to take place last Monday evening, was called off. Arts and Crafts Theatre has a seating capacity of just 307. The request for tickets two or three days before the proposed show indicated that three times 307 wanted to attend the show.

So, as we say, perhaps it was just as well it was called off. So many would have been disappointed. Only in one respect is there any regret. The Carmel Library was to have been the beneficiary of the net receipts—and the library always needs money. No doubt, however, something else will be put on for the library.

The reason for the call-off? Well, to give a vaudeville show actors are necessary on Saturday and Monday. The company got a hurry call to return to Hollywood, and about forty of them beat it pronto. No actors, no show.

John Jordan is receiving congratulations on all hands for his splendid entertainment of the visitors. They are all coming to Pine Inn again.

Guests at El Monte Verde apartments during the week were Martin Johnson and Philip La Vie of Hollywood.

Valentine Awaits You at Arts and Crafts

Pine Needle: "Mr. Dan Cupid, who is engaged somewhere—not here—in the manufacture of Love, is occupying a house in Carmel for the week-end."

This gentleman is an old friend of many of the Carmel residents and there will be several social diversions held in his honor, among them a party to be given by some of his admirers at Arts and Crafts hall this afternoon.

Mr. Cupid has sent to his factory for an extra supply of quivers, and the ladies who are acting as hostesses are asking for a large donation of hearts. If you're satisfied with your heart and don't wish to exchange it for another or to have it used as a target, you can bring your pocket-book and extract a dollar therefrom, which will entitle you to play cards or mah jongg.

It's to be a very happy afternoon. Of course Mr. Cupid will be in personal attendance and guarantees that everyone will win—something—beautiful paintings by local artists or minus bridge scores. And there will be dainty refreshments for all. If you're good and don't speak harshly to your partner for leading the fourth best from her longest and strongest suit, you may be fortunate enough to hear Love's wings a-fluttering.

Anyway, the "kick" you'll get out of the party will be worth a dollar.

TIME—Right now—soon—2 o'clock this afternoon.

PLACE—Arts and Crafts Hall, Casanova street.

WEATHER—Fair and warmer, or rainy and disagreeable—whatever you like best.

THE OCCASION—Cupid's Party.

BENEFIT—Carmel Club of Arts and Crafts.

Better hustle around and get out the old accordeon-pleated silk dress with the lace yoke and get down there, for Dan Cupid may not pass this way again.

Local Fire Department Hold Harmony Meet

The old and the new members of the Carmel Fire Department have got together. Harmony now prevails. An enthusiastic meeting was held a few days ago. The guest of honor was Fire Commissioner Henry P. Larouette. Many topics of interest were discussed.

The first savings account, $100, to be known as the Social Equipment Fund, has been made in the Bank of Carmel. This fund will be utilized to fit up the club and athletic rooms of the future firehouse.

A committee was appointed to arrange for a competitive fire drill.

The Pine Cone's New Location

The business, editorial and mechanical departments of the Pine Cone Press will shortly move to new quarters on Dolores street, opposite the Postoffice.

The growth of Carmel and with it the growth of the Pine Cone's business brought about this change in location. Every department of the business required more space, more light, more equipment, more employes than the present location on Ocean avenue afforded.

Last Saturday's issue of the weekly Pine Cone was the first number of the eleventh year of publication. The issuance of a special edition celebrating the event has been deferred.

The new offices will not only give opportunity for more and better service to present patrons, but will enable us to attract and hold new business.

The Local Tree Question

The Red Turpentine Beetle, Arch-enemy of our Native Pine

By Fremont O. Ballou

In view of the fact that much misinformation as well as lack of information exists regarding the beetle responsible for the most serious damage to our Monterey pine, a few facts concerning this pernicious insect appear apropos.

The red turpentine beetle (Dendroctonus valens Lec.) is a small, reddish-brown insect. The female is about one-fourth of an inch long, while the male is slightly smaller. The insect is rather sluggish in its movements, but very persistent in its attacks and capable of doing a surprising amount of damage, as many of the local trees bear mute testimony. The beetles are provided with a very effective and powerful set of mouth parts with which they bore into the tree. Trees most readily attacked appear to be those weakened by lack of water, attacks of other insects, etc. Infected trees are commonly found near dead trees, piles of pine wood, rustic pine fences, etc., which had been infested with beetles, these having developed and migrated to nearby living trees. When the tree is in a vigorous condition, the beetle is usually unable to enter, being repelled by the flow of sap from the wound made, which fills up the entrance bore and often entraps the insect. Many trees show the results of these unsuccessful attempts to enter. The point of entry is usually in a crevice of the bark at the base of the trunk or on a large, exposed root, and never more than five or six feet above ground on the trunk. The point of entry can be found by cutting away the bark just above a place where coarse castings have been thrown out. These castings may consist of a mixture of sawdust and pitch or sawdust alone, and when fresh indicate the bettle is alive and working in the tree. After entering, the beetles excavate a broad chamber by eating out the cambium, the soft, living tissue lying between the bark and the heartwood. Along the edges of the chamber the female lays her eggs. The whitish larvae or grubs, which hatch, commence feeding outward en masse, taking all of the cambium as they go. If present in sufficient numbers around the base of a tree, they can soon girdle it. When full grown, the larvae go into a resting stage, later transforming into full-grown bettles. These leave the old tree for a new victim.

Although the worst of a dozen or more insect pests which attack the Monterey pine, fortunately this beetle is the most easily controlled if taken in time. Badly infested dead or dying trees should be cut and barked to expose and kill the developing brood. Many of the trees, here in Carmel, marked as harboring the beetles can be saved. The simplest and most effective method is to dig them out. Carefully follow up the burrow with all of its branches, removing only what bark is necessary to do this, and destroy all beetles, larvae and pupae found. The wound should be painted with asphalt or some other protective coat.

It is only by constant vigilance, with frequent examination of the trees for the tell-tale sawdust, and prompt treatment when found, that the pines for which Carmel is noted, can be conserved.

OFF FOR HONOLULU

Mrs. E. A. Kluegel sails today for Honolulu. She went to San Francisco on Thursday. A farewell tea was tendered Mrs. Kluegel by Mrs. Herbert Heron, and the following guests wished her bon voyage: Dr. Amelia L. Gates, Mrs. C. Halsted Yates, Mrs. Alice Comins, Mrs. Richard W. Johnson, Mrs. Robinson Jeffers, Mrs. George Blackman, Misses Marian and Camila Daniels, Miss Gertrude Hazelton, Miss Caroline Blackman, Miss Louise Conger, Miss Katherine Corrigan, Miss May H. Anson.

PINE NEEDLES

Mrs. Grace Selby is on a business trip to San Francisco, where she is purchasing hats for her new shop, the Carmelita Shoppe, which owens on the first of March.

A social tea for the benefit of Carmel Church will be held at Grey Gables, on Lincoln street at Seventh avenue, next Friday afternoon. All are cordially invited.

During the Weston-Hagemeyer exhibit in San Frantisco, Johan Hagemeyer is making weekly trips to Carmel to execute commissions in his local studio.

There has been a change in the Grand Duke Cyril canine department. Too much had to be "verboten" Alexander, the German police dog, so he was turned back to Roxor Kennels for a Russian wolf hound.

The spacious Gottfried house on the south end of Dolores street will shortly be occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Weldon J. Bowers of San Francisco.

The Pine Cone was in error in its last issue when it stated that all the Flanders' furniture was saved from the fire which destroyed the Ruhl house at Pebble Beach. Only the first floor furniture was saved. Many valuable articles on the second floor were a total loss.

Tuesday afternoon next a "silver tea" is to be given for the benefit of St. Anne's Guild, the welfare organization of All Saints' Church. The affair will be held at the home of Mrs. Henry Wood, north Carmelo street, east side, beyond the gulch. All are cordially invited.

The announcement that Mrs. Roberta Arment Leitch has decided to give instruction in voice culture is hailed with delight by many friends. Mrs. Leitch has had splendid training for the work and a real interest in what she may accomplish. A charming studio has been fitted up in the Stevenson house in Monterey.

Hilda Argo is back in Carmel. Only she's not Argo any more. She's Mrs. Stanley Pullen. Married in Berkeley during Christmas week. Mr. and Mrs. Pullen reside in Berkeley, where Mr. Pullen is in the electrical engineering profession. Young Billy Argo was here also, renewing his acquaintance with his boy friends.

Last Monday the Carmel Girl Scouts went on a short hike to Cook's Cove, where they enjoyed supper and games. Captain and Mrs. Newton chaperoned the party, which was made up of Elizabeth Reamer, Genevieve Newell, Gwendolin Snipes, Tiny Pearson, Josephine Dibrell, Helen Turner, Wilma Bassett, Jane Lawler, Violet Payne, Carola Thudichum, Jane Foster, Mary Douglas, Virginia Rockwell.

WESTERN BANKERS TO HEAR REYNOLDS

Chicago Financier Will Speak at San Francisco Conference February 20.

Geroge M. Reynolds, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago, will answer the question: "What is the basis for business confidence?" when he addresses delegates at the banquet to be held in San Francisco, when the Western Regional Savings Conference of the American Bankers Association concludes its two day meeting in San Francisco, February 19 and 20.

The selection of Geo. M. Reynolds to deliver the final talk of the Conference, is the culmination of as diversified a program as has been prepared for any bankers' gathering in this country. The activities will start Wednesday, February 18, when the American Institute of Banking holds a public speaking contest, at which a representiative of each of the organization's chapters in the eleven western states will be asked to participate. The subject chosen for the speakers is: "How Savings Banking Helps the Community." The winner of this contest will be invited to address one of the general sessions of the convention. A suitable trophy will be presented to the winners of first and second place. E. V. Krick president of the National Institute organization, is in charge of all arrangements for the contest.

Arrangements have been made for the reception and registration of all delegates, at the St. Francis Hotel, official headquarters for the convention. Immediately, an opportunity will be given to view the specially arranged exhibit of bank appliances. This display, an unique feature of the convention, will include not only specimens of various mechanical devices for improving the internal practices of bank administration, but also a number of the latest specialties, successfully used in the development of new business. The exhibit will be kept open during the conference and will be located in a room adjoining the convention hall.

The sessions themselves will be devoted to the program subjects, with short quizzes following. A theatre party has been arranged for the evening of February 19—Thursday—and each visiting delegate will be supplied with tickets. During the day special arrangements have been made to provide for the entertainment of the wives of delegates. Sight-seeing tours, teas and luncheons are included in the items of interest.

An interesting event planned for the women, Friday evening, is a dinner at one of the most popular Chinese cafes, to be followed by a trip through Chinatown.

JUST KIDDING

Being the Semi-Serious Musings of Carmel's Own Sam Pepys

GOOD MORNING! Friends of Radio Land! This is Pacific Coast Station S A R, broadcasting from Carmel, the Beauty Spot within the Circle of Enchantment, which is the Monterey Peninsula, playground and parking place of poet and peasant. We want you to know, kind listeners-in, that we are miles and miles from the canneries. Please bear that in mind as we proceed to give you a little historical and descriptive matter. If you find it too dry, we'll be on the air again next Saturday.

IT WAS HALF a century after the discovery of America that Juan Rodriguez de Cabrillo sailed into the Bay of Monterey. He sniffed the air, and sailed right out again. Monterey as a settlement began with a presidio, five bars, and a mission. This was the original San Carlos Mission, removed later to the sweeter air on the banks of the Carmel River, a two-dollar taxi ride distant. The landing place of Don Sebastian Viscaino, explorer and adventurer, under an oak —a fumed oak—may be seen at the mouth of a ravine emptying into the Bay. This is the Plymouth Rock of California. The oak died, but its stump was preserved in alcohol (rubbing alcohol) and may be viewed today by those interested.

IT WAS IN 1770 that Gaspar de Portola came up from Tia Juana by land, and Junipero Serra, Father of the Missions, came up to see about Pilgrimage Guarantees or something of the kind. They joined forces and attacked the Cannery Barons all along the line, but so strongly were the latter intrenched, and so deadly their gas attacks, that the Spaniards were driven back. Gaspar died, gasping: "It is written 'See Rome; and then die.' But I say unto you, 'Smell Monterey, and die quicker.'" Father Serra, unable to best the Barons, beat it for Carmel. Later, fortified by garlic and tequila, Mexican troops invaded Monterey and a truce was established. Then the House of the Four Winds was built, and there of an afternoon during the "splendid idle Forties," officers of the Mexican army lolled and partook of all the wind stirring while inventing the game now known as mah jongg.

FOR THE LITERARY pilgrim the most famous shrine on the Peninsula is the adobe house near Pearl street known as "Stevenson House." The beloved wanderer, searching for an "airy room with five windows," settled down to write The Pavilion on the Links, but was soon forced to board up four of the five windows. At Chapter IV he was wearing a gas-mask. At Chapter V he gave it up and faded to a goat ranch in the Santa Lucia mountains. Robert Louis had his little preferences.

IN THE OLD DAYS, wrote John Warren Stoddard of Monterey, "she was a dear old stupid town. Geese fed in the gutters and hissed at the passers-by." No geese feed in the gutters today. They're all down at the piers, feeding with the gulls. And nothing hisses in Monterey except the steam valves of the fish cookers. The signs along the gutters—signs reading "PARKING LIMIT 40 MINUTES"—mean exactly what they say. 'Tisn't safe to linger longer.

JENNY LIND once sang in Monterey. It was the occasion of a Canners' Convention. Palladini once sang there also. The famous baritone rendered "Three Fishers Went Sailing Out Into the West, and Came Back with Three Cases Under Their Vest." Booth and Barracuda were also heard there on the stage of the first theatre built in California. Booth is there in Monterey today, and still going strong.

IT WAS HERE that Longfellow typed his famous "Chamber of Commerce Prayer":

"That the night shall be filled with fragrance,
And the smells which infest the day
Shall spread their wings like the buzzard,
And spiral pronto away."

AND HIAWATHA laid aside his bow, to grab a pen, and write of Monterey:

At Del Monte
On the golf links
Unlike smell of new-mown hay
Comes the scent of
Steaming herring
From that road to Monterey.

IT WAS IN Monterey that Lord Byron conceived his famous "Maid of Carmel, Ere We Part." It seems that the lover had come down from San Francisco to see his girl at Carmel. He hated to return through Monterey. So he said thusly:

Maid of Carmel, ere I leave,
Take thy kerchief from thy sleeve;
Scent it sweet with eau de rose,
Bind it tightly 'cross my nose.
"Return by sea?" But I can't row.
So kiss me quick, and let me go.

IT WAS WHILE STANDING at the Presidio, talking with Tennyson, that Rudyard Kipling almost fainted. Quoth Alfred:

Maud Muller on a canning day
Beat it quick from Monterey.

AND Rudyard came back with:

"Why're the people holdin' noses?"
Asked Recruit on Parade.
"The Canneries, the Canneries,"
The wise old sergeant said.
"At the Grove they're burnin' punk-sticks,
Carmel violets hang their heads,
For they've been a-cannin' sardines
All the mornin'."

WHICH IS where we get off the air and give some of the other stations a chance.

International Photography Exhibit

An exhibit of unusual interest was opened at Gump's Gallery, San Francisco, last Monday by two internationally-known photographers—Edward Weston of Mexico, who was here recently, and Johan Hagemeyer of Carmel.

Mr. Weston, formerly of California, has returned from Mexico, where he now resides and has his studio, bringing an extraordinarily interesting collection of photographs, the result of his two years' work in Mexico.

This exhibit, which includes landscapes, portraits and nudes, has created a sensation wherever shown.

The work of Mr. Hagemeyer is so well known in this vicinity that local comment is superfluous.

Mr. Weston and Mr. Hagemeyer will conduct a studio in San Francisco for one month prior to leaving together for Mr. Weston's home in Mexico City. The exhibit will remain open until Saturday, February 21. Appreciative comment of both artists' work is as follows:

"Edward Weston noted photographer of So. California recently gave The Section of Photography nine of his pictures, they are an addition of a forward looking type of photography that we did not have."

Smithsonian Institute, United States National Museum, Washington, D. C., Feb. 15, 1925.

"... And then when we come to portrait studies made by masters of the camera we are prompted to ask: What have the painters on these, even in the higher attributes of character analysis, expression or psychology? Note Edward Weston's portrait of Ruth St. Denis for aesthetic and intellectual divination seldom registered through any but the instantaneous medium."

New York Art Exhibitions and Gallery, Oct. 27, 1916.

"Which is the best picture in the Salon? That is a truly difficult question to answer, but I can tell you which I think is the best group of pictures by the same artist. They are by Edward Weston, of California."

Mr. Bertram Park, Honorary Secretary of the London Salon, London, 1918.

"... I do not hesitate to say that this print by Edward Weston is the most perfect photography I have ever seen and one of the most successful examples of sane expressionism to be found in any medium."

Elizabeth Bingham. Saturday Night. August 19, 1922. Los Angeles, Cal.

"The work of Edward Weston calls up in the mind severe comparison between the new and the old. Its newness is that of the New World where ideas are free from the modifications and complications of a tradition and convention."

Editor of Photography. London, May 28, '19.

"At the last meeting of the Salon two new members were elected. They are respectively the Earl of Carnarvon and Edward Weston, of California, both of whom are regular exhibitors at the Salon, and are workers of the front rank."

Photographic News, London, '19.

"... No es el fotografo vulgar que se repite hasta el bostezo ... Weston es ante todo un psicologo profundo, un atento observador de espiritus... Es uno de los fotografos mas sobrios que conozco. Su talento le permite descubrir cosas en quien nadie repara..."

Manuel Horta. El Universal Ilustrado. Julio 10, '24. Mexico, D. F.

"Down in Carmel I ran across an artist in photography who has the right idea—Johan Hagemeyer. Here is a man who is content to be nature's interpreter, not a fakey improver of her methods."

Redfern Mason in S. F. Examiner. Dec. 31, 1922.

"Mr. Hagemeyer is a very capable exponent of this modern method. His work should command attention."

Camera Craft, October, 1922.

"It is in this slender group of pioneers that Johan Hagemeyer belongs. He is a Hollander of keen artistic sensibility, whose early environment in a land of singular limpidity of atmosphere has brought to his work a certain caressing subtlety. His photographs bear the impress of an independent personality fortified by the confidence which only genuine creative resource can give, and whatever he touches is characterized by a certain lyrical delicacy of feeling or bold expressionism."

Frank Morton Gregory of S. F. Chronicle.

"... But a man from Mill Valley—Johan Hagemeyer—has some tremendously stunning things. His work is interpretive purely. It is as if the camera were used as a medium for expressing the artist's vision. The two portraits shown are no longer portraits, but marvelous interpretation of queer souls."

Ruth Pilkous, S. F. Journal, May 28, 1922.

"A capable performance is a print by Johan Hagemeyer. It is a record of the dignity and beauty to be found in present-day mechanical subjects."

Christian Science Monitor, June 3, 1922.

"Wat een merkwaardig ding toch "Pedestrians" van Johan Hagemeyer. En zie eens wat by maakt van zulk een onderwerp als "Steamshovel." Wat een bijna afstootend, onbelangrijk, onderwerp en wat heeft de man, die daar terecht schoonheid in zag, ervan weten te maken."

Focus Fotoblad. Holland, June 15, 1922.

The Time for Doing

(From the Peninsula Herald)

Carmel is to be congratulated that it met the sewerage disposal problem with a decision to install a modern sewer system—and then proceeded to have the installation done. For a while the streets of Carmel will be the scene of activities not entirely pleasing to the motorist; but when the work is completed, a big job will have been placed behind the city, and its growth will be unhampered by the effect of criticism that is with justice leveled against any rapidly building municipality that has neglected this major question of health. * * * Carmel's planning commission realized that the time to save money was by spending it on a sewer system now. There are other savings besides early solutions of sewerage questions, that city planning commissions can bring about for the eventual prosperity and health of their communities, if they do not wait until their energies must be spent in rectifying in the future the errors of the present and the past.

SOME SAY IT IS MATING DAY

Today is St. Valentine's Day.

The origin of the day is known to have been because of two saints of that name, the festivals of both falling on February 14. No one seems to know to which one the day most rightfully belongs. Both belong to the period of the Emperor Claudius, both died the same day, and both were buried on the same road leading out from Rome. It is also said that the association of "lovers' notes" with Valentine's Day is purely accidental, or, at most, devised by writers of fiction.

Barring those who may observe the day on religious grounds, Valentine's Day has become to most of us a mere passing fancy, a day for paper-frilled picture-cards with red hearts in the center; and to others an opportunity to "get even" with some person by letting him know what is thought of him by sending the anonymous grotesque caricature. The latter, happily is passing.

JAY LAWS AGAINST JAY-WALKING

The city council of Los Angeles has fallen in line with other misguided lawmaking bodies in prohibiting "jay-walking," or in more explicit terms, crossing the street between intersections. A few days ago the first arrest was made under the new ordinance. The victim was a man who crossed the street between blocks at 2 o'clock in the morning! And at this writing, we read that another man, who was about to be arrested for violating the jay-walking law, simply let loose and poked the policeman one in the jaw.

When, O when, shall the American people have a vacation from senseless law passing? When it gets so a fellow can't cross the street of a city of these United States without being thrown in jail, it is time to call a halt. They argue that this will prevent accidents. So it may. So would a law to prohibit one walking up stairs in his own home. The question is deeper than accident prevention. It strikes at freedom, it smacks at tyranny, it invades private rights to an extent that will undoubtedly cause just resentment and, in the long run, injurious reaction.

"Woman: A Vindication"

While this book, by Anthony M. Ludovici, is the work of a so-called anti-feminist, yet it is certain that its author has shed valuable light on a much discussed question, and has brought about a clearer and more wholesome understanding of the subject. This is because, first of all, he writes from absolute conviction, and secondly, because he is fearless, vigorous and direct.

His shafts are directed principally against Puritans, "negative" men and women, and celibates, and in the abstract, against pretense, cant, false values and hypocrisy.

After many years of struggle for the emancipation of women, fighting for the vote, for equality, for recognition in the affairs of the world, these arguments come as a decided shock. They make us stop and take our bearings. Modern women have fought hard for their places beside men. They do the same work, play the same sports, make speeches, climb fences, shoot ducks and go fishing. All this they have acquired, but what have they lost? Much of the charm, the exquisitness and the real beauty and value of womanhood.

Ludovici says that woman is primarily and basically concerned with life, and that all her virtues and her vices derive from this source. To pretend anything else, he considers simply absurd. He goes back, perhaps to a forgotten argument, but he goes back, too, to commonsense, and biologically, he is right.

If there is one point, however, on which his book lays itself open to criticism, it is in his failure to consider woman of any importance intellectually. We will agree that if it comes to a question of choosing between an intellectual pursuit and "life," it is vastly more important for most women to choose the latter. Yet women today often demand both; and where the demand is sincere and honest, it should be given the consideration it deserves.

After pages of scathing criticism and ruthless iconoclasm, we come across this fine passage: "The man who has had a good mother has learned to feel a certain confidence in his own unaided efforts, because the best in him has been diligently sought, encouraged and brought to the fore; he has acquired a certain vigorous sanguineness and courage, because, having started life so well, in such a glorious morning of sunshine, he is conscious of stored-up warmth within him, upon which he can fall back in moments of loneliness, gloom and trouble; but, above all, he has been launched forth into the world with at least one solid experience, one ineffaceable impression of human kindness and human beauty."

The effect of this early influence has been seen in most of the great men in history and the lack of it will be remembered in the cases of Schopenhauer, Byron and de Quincey.

This book has been the subject of many fierce controversies in England—and even here in Carmel it has provoked many heated discussions. This alone would make it valuable, for the spirited play of ideas and the interchange of thought and conviction bring life and vigor and constant stimulation to the intellect.
